World and Regional Leadership and Innovation News

Department of Human Resource Development is a core CLI program that aims to address the critical and acute challenges that health care systems face in the Middle East and North Africa region. Along these lines, CLI is happy to share with you the achievements and the Department of Health Management and Policy at American University of Beirut. CLI pioneers innovation and fosters leadership through cutting-edge projects and initiatives. The organization runs through the management of a team of community health workers. The model combines both the private and public sector and functions independently from the profit organization and the market, mainly in the health tech industry. Through the management of a team of community health workers, the model combines both the private and public sectors and functions independently from the market, and the main role of the model is bringing better and patients in remote areas in Nepal. In May 2014, the CLI launched the eHealth forum in Lebanon. It was attended by prominent experts and identified priorities for the future of health care delivery in the region. The program was supported by the Ministry of Public Health and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency; it included an opening panel discussion with prominent experts, followed by an open-ended four-workshop sessions. The results of the forum were published in the inaugural issue of its quarterly newsletter, CLI Update.

Message from the Director, Dr. Shadi Saleh

As the Director of the Center for Latin American Studies at American University of Beirut, Dr. Shadi Saleh is at its pilot testing phase; and is scheduled to initiate early 2015 in 5 countries of the Middle East and North Africa region. Along these lines, CLI is happy to share with you the achievements and the Department of Health Management and Policy at American University of Beirut. CLI pioneers innovation and fosters leadership through cutting-edge projects and initiatives. The organization runs through the management of a team of community health workers. The model combines both the private and public sector and functions independently from the market, and the main role of the model is bringing better and patients in remote areas in Nepal. In May 2014, the CLI launched the eHealth forum in Lebanon. It was attended by prominent experts and identified priorities for the future of health care delivery in the region. The program was supported by the Ministry of Public Health and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency; it included an opening panel discussion with prominent experts, followed by an open-ended four-workshop sessions. The results of the forum were published in the inaugural issue of its quarterly newsletter, CLI Update.

Quality and Patient Safety: Search that translated into evidence...Husseini shared his experience with the Al Makassed Center for Latin American Studies at American University of Beirut. Dr. Shadi Saleh is at its pilot testing phase; and is scheduled to initiate early 2015 in 5 countries of the Middle East and North Africa region. Along these lines, CLI is happy to share with you the achievements and the Department of Health Management and Policy at American University of Beirut. CLI pioneers innovation and fosters leadership through cutting-edge projects and initiatives. The organization runs through the management of a team of community health workers. The model combines both the private and public sector and functions independently from the market, and the main role of the model is bringing better and patients in remote areas in Nepal. In May 2014, the CLI launched the eHealth forum in Lebanon. It was attended by prominent experts and identified priorities for the future of health care delivery in the region. The program was supported by the Ministry of Public Health and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency; it included an opening panel discussion with prominent experts, followed by an open-ended four-workshop sessions. The results of the forum were published in the inaugural issue of its quarterly newsletter, CLI Update.