Biographical Sketch

Isa Iskandar Ma'luf (1869–1956) is a Lebanese writer, poet, historian, and journalist. Born on April 11, 1869, in Kafr 'Uqāb, he hails from a prominent family that traces its origin back to members of al-Ghasasinah, who established themselves in the Levant in the 17th and 18th c. Isa Iskandar Ma'luf received his primary education at his village school, graduating from al-Shuwayr English Secondary School. He went on to assume various teaching positions at various schools in Lebanon and Syria, including the Jesuit School in Kafr 'Uqāb, Madrasat Kaftin al-Urthudhuksiyah, and al-Kulliyah al-Sharqiyah. He helped to edit the newspaper Lubnān and established al-Athar magazine in 1911. He was a prolific writer and published extensively in various Egyptian, Lebanese, and Syrian magazines such as al-Muqtataf, al-Hilāl, and al-Mashriq. He also published about ninety books, mostly printed in Lebanon or Syria on a variety of subjects. Ranging from the history of medicine among the Arabs (1921); the history of Levantine cities such as Zahle (1911) and Damascus (1924); to the biographies of rulers such as al-Amir Fakhr al-Din II (1927) and al-Amir Bashir (1914); and accounts and genealogies of families such as the Ma'luf family (1908), and the Yaziji family (1944, 2 vols). He also composed four plays, three of which were performed in 1893. Ma'luf was a member of various writers groups and academies, including the Arabic Academy in Damascus (1919), the Arabic Language International Councils in Egypt, Damascus, Brazil, and Lebanon and was one of the founders of the Lebanese Academy in 1928. 'Isā married Afifeh Ibrahim al-Ma'luf in 1898 and had seven children: Fawzi (1899 -1930), Shafiq (1905 – 1986), Riyad (1912-1982), Iskandar (Alex), Edmond, Evelyn, and Odette. Three of his sons are of the famous Mahjar Poets: Fawzi, Shafiq, and Riyad. He died in Zahlah on July 2, 1956.
