

Mrs. Al Shaar, a faculty instructor for Scholars in HeAlth Research Summer Program, and a doctorate candidate in Population Health Sciences-Nutritional Epidemiology at Harvard University has recently received a grant for two years, from the American Heart Association, to conduct research on BMI and physical activity in relation to outcomes after myocardial infarction utilizing data from 2 large US cohorts: the Nurses' Health Study and Health Professionals' Follow up Study cohorts.