

Asfari Institute for Civil Society and Citizenship

Faculty Affiliation

The Asfari Institute welcomes faculty within AUB and from any university to affiliate with the Asfari Institute for Civil Society and Citizenship. Affiliation provides a framework for like-minded scholars to inspire and be inspired by others working in the same general fields of interest. Affiliation with the Asfari Institute provides the following opportunities for both the faculty member and the Institute:

- Participation in ongoing discussions and debates surrounding civil society and citizenship issues, including discussions on ongoing and proposed research projects and other activities. Faculty affiliates may be asked to contribute to blind review processes and assessments of research papers.
- Mutually benefiting from the multi-disciplinary interests of faculty members and multi-directional consultation on research interests and innovative proposals
- Contribution to the development of new pedagogical material on civil society and citizenship to include undergraduate and graduate courses, short courses and capacity building workshops sponsored by the Asfari Institute.
- Affiliates would be the first to receive Asfari Institute publications and research output and information on events and future planned activities

Faculty affiliation with the Asfari Institute does not imply remuneration or financial support.

For AUB faculty only: the Asfari Institute or the faculty member may request a course buy-out option to enable the faculty member to devote some time for any of the above activities.

Faculty affiliation is formalized between the Asfari Institute and the faculty member in a letter explaining the parameters and mutual expectations, and defining the duration of affiliation.

If interested in affiliating with the Asfari Institute for Civil Society and Citizenship, please contact

Please send requests to the Asfari Institute at asfariinst@aub.edu.lb