

Mark Doumit graduated from the American University of Beirut (AUB) with a BA in Psychology in 2010. After graduating he worked as a research assistant on constructing the first Arabic-derived personality inventory/test, as well as part of the Evidence-based Healthcare Management Unit at AUB Medical Center (AUBMC). In 2014, Mark graduated with an MA in General Psychology from New York University, after which he worked for 3 years in the Psychiatry Department at AUBMC as a research assistant involved in projects related to neuromodulation, depression, schizophrenia, instrument validation, and mental health stigma. Mark is currently a 3rd year PhD Student in Biomedical Sciences with a concentration in neuroscience at AUB.