

SAVE 15%
on all bouquets · same-day delivery available.

teleflora.
SHOP NOW >>

Mbbile | About us | Photos | Videos | Subscriptions | RSS Feeds | Today's Paper | Classifieds | Contact Us

Search The Daily Star...

Advanced Search

THE DAILY STAR

LEBANON

TUESDAY, 12 FEB 2013
09:33 AM Beirut time

WEATHER

Beirut
15 °C

BLOM INDEX

BLOM
1,201.7

- Home
 - News
 - Business
 - Opinion
 - Sports
 - Culture
 - Technology
 - Entertainment
-
- Politics
 - Local News
 - Middle East
 - International
 - Analysis
 - Health
 - Science
 - Environment

Local News

- FOLLOW
- PRINT
- E-MAIL
- RSS
- e PAPER
- SHARE THIS

AUB study: Staple Lebanese breakfast foods high in sodium

February 09, 2013 01:22 AM
By Lysandra Ohrstrom
The Daily Star

Lebanese breakfast may be contributing to poor health. (The Daily Star/ Hasan Shaaban)

A+ A-

BEIRUT: Manakeesh, labneh and other high-sodium staples of the Lebanese diet may be responsible for high rates of cardiovascular disease and high blood pressure in the country, according to a recent study by the American University of Beirut Medical Center and the Faculty of Agricultural and Food Sciences.

Researchers surveyed the eating habits of 2,000 adults across the country and found that the majority of Lebanese people consume well over the 5 gram daily sodium intake limit prescribed by the World Health Organization. Processed breads, cheeses and cured meats account for 70 percent of the average sodium intake in the country, said Lara Nasreddine, an assistant professor of nutrition at AUB who co-authored the paper.

"It is a real public health concern because we are witnessing a high level of hypertension and cardiovascular diseases in Lebanon, and we need to raise awareness about the major sources of salt in our diet," she told The Daily Star. "People know they are eating salt when they shake it on their food, but they need to be able to understand what food labels mean in order to make better choices about their salt intake."

In the study, manakeesh was singled out as a wolf in sheep's clothing. It accounts for 4 percent of the average individual sodium intake in Lebanon and dough-based foods in general account for 25 percent of the total.

STORY SUMMARY

Manakeesh, labneh and other high-sodium staples of the Lebanese diet may be responsible for high rates of cardiovascular disease and high blood pressure in the country, according to a recent study by the American University of Beirut Medical Center and the Faculty of Agricultural and Food Sciences.

It accounts for 4 percent of the average individual sodium intake in Lebanon and dough-based foods in

More from

LYSANDRA OHRSTROM

Shops pull horsemeat in beef's clothing

Steel industry girds itself against crisis

Number of vacant shops in Solidere mounts

Popular acne medication faces ban

AUB provost working to make sure more students get financial aid

ENTITIES

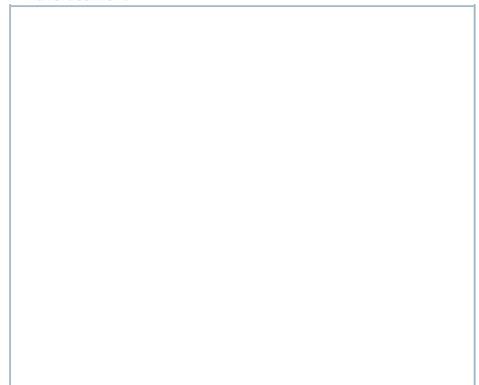

- Countries
- Associations & groups
- Educational institutes
- People

MOST POPULAR

VIEWED SEARCHED E-MAILED

1. Catholics shocked as pope resigns, but little emotion
2. Syria's Assad vows to resist as blast hits Turkish border
3. Assad vows to resist as blast strikes just across Turkish border
4. 34 charged over deadly east Lebanon incident
5. Iran, Hezbollah 'building militias' in Syria
6. Jumblatt slams Future lawmakers over Arsal incident

Advertisement

STAY CONNECTED

MULTIMEDIA

IMAGES

Pope Benedict XVI resigns

According to WHO's most recent estimates in 2008, 39 percent of the population suffers from high blood pressure and 30 percent of these cases are the result of high salt intake. Excessive sodium consumption can also cause cardiovascular diseases, strokes, stomach cancer and osteoporosis.

Nasreddine said that the researchers tried to determine the public health costs of treating diseases associated with excessive salt intake but were not able to calculate exact figures due to a lack of publicly available data.

The release of the study is just one prong in AUB's strategy to raise awareness of the risks associated with too much salt consumption. In November 2011, two AUB Medical School faculty members created the Lebanon Action for Salt and Health group to do research and advocacy work on sodium-related health issues and identify the primary sources of salt in local cuisine.

LASH has put together a shopping list of foods suitable for low-salt diets and those that should be avoided.

The group is also working on the AUB Neighborhood Salt Map project to identify high-sodium products sold at bakeries in the Ras Beirut area.

Another goal is to improve food labeling systems in coordination with public health officials to better inform people of the nutrition information listed in prepackaged food labels.

Though too much manakeesh can wreak havoc on ones' waistline in a matter of weeks, Nasreddine warned that the symptoms of a high-sodium diet are not always immediately visible.

"You might get headaches or have high blood pressure, but hypertension can also be asymptomatic, which is why it can be so dangerous, because the [patient] might not have any symptoms until late into the disease."

A version of this article appeared in the print edition of The Daily Star on February 09, 2013, on page 3.

Tweet 8

Home Local News

Recommend 125 +1 2

Advertisement

Replace Your Soy Sauce

www.bragg.com

BRAGG Liquid Aminos Made From Soy No Added Sodium or MSG; Glu

AdChoices

Around the Web

Colorado Considering DUI for Stoners!

The Unlikely Center of America's Hemp Renaissance

Why Watching CNN Should Give Us Nightmares...

Clooney Talks Sudan With Obama

12 Years Old and Convicted of Murder

Need a Gun? Now You Just Need To Press Print...

Comments

Your feedback is important to us!

We invite all our readers to share with us their views and comments about this article.

Disclaimer: Comments submitted by third parties on this site are the sole responsibility

Locations & natural formations

Publication

Advertisement

Pope Benedict XVI did Monday what no pope has done in half a millennium, announcing his resignation and sending the already troubled Catholic Church scrambling to replace the leader of its 1 billion followers by Easter.

View all →

Advertisement

STAR'S COLUMNISTS

RAMI G. KHOURI

Rethink civil society amid Arab turmoil

MICHAEL YOUNG

Don't give in to Lebanon's men in black

DAVID IGNATIUS

Muslim fertility is quietly on the decline

View all →

Looking for a job

Check

THE DAILY STAR Classifieds

Advertisement

EDITORIAL CARTOONS

of the individual(s) whose content is submitted. The Daily Star accepts no responsibility for the content of comment(s), including, without limitation, any error, omission or inaccuracy therein. Please note that your email address will NOT appear on the site.

ALSO ON THE DAILY STAR

Justice Ministry rules that civil marriage is valid | News , ... 3 comments

EU envoy: Response to Burgas needs consensus | News , ...
1 comment

Aoun says FPM waging war against corruption | News , ... 2 comments

Clash over telecoms data feared in Cabinet | News , Politics | ...
1 comment

1 comment

Discussion ▾ |

 5thDrawer • 2 days ago
When 'cheap fill-up' is the first choice of the poor

0 ^ ▾ ▾ • Reply • Share >

DISQUS

 Comment feed

 Subscribe via email

TODAY'S PAPER

BECOME A STAR FAN

 The Daily Star

29,110 people like The Daily Star.

 Facebook social plugin

We're on

  +1,043

News	Business	Opinion	Sports	Culture	Technology	Entertainment
Politics Local News Middle East International Analysis Health Science Environment	Lebanon Middle East International Analysis	Editorial Columnist Commentary	Football Basketball Tennis Motor Sports Athletics Boxing MMA Golf Sports Rugby	Film Art Books Performance Music Lifestyle Travel & Tourism	International Regional	Celebrities Movies Movie Guide Sudoku Str8ts