

Khaled Sayyah

Khaled is a staff nurse in the Operating Rooms (OR). He is very dedicated to his job; staying long hours and very frequently coming to work during weekends and on vacation days. Despite the stress inherent to the job, his colleagues have never heard him complain. He works in a very professional manner, and excels in the various tasks that he performs in the operating room. Physicians rely on him and he has earned the respect and appreciation of everyone he has worked with. Many of his colleagues look up to him as their role model.

Several cases were reported in which he helped devise creative solutions that were effective and yet inexpensive. For example, he devised an improved method of post operation irrigation for the increased comfort of patients.

Colleagues always refer to him for help and Khaled remains humble while lending a helping hand; explaining things to colleagues and sharing with them his valuable experience.

Khaled is very customer-focused. He has earned words of praise and appreciation from patients and colleagues throughout an excellent track record spanning over 18 years. He fully understands that increased communication with patients and their families improves their awareness and consequently reduces their anxiety.

One of the surgeons that has worked with Mr. Sayyah said about him: “In my tenure at AUBMC for the past ten years, and in my previous thirteen years in the US, I have been the occasion of observing and working with several nursing staff and assistants. I can easily say that Mr. Sayyah is one of the best nurses I have worked with, if not the best.”
