

Stochastic Optimization of the Water Flooding Process through Front Tracking

George Saad and Fouad Azizi

Faculty of Engineering and Architecture, AUB

Abstract

The objective of this study is to optimize the water flooding process by controlling the front dynamics of the injected fluid. In cases where the injected fluid composition is fixed, the only given way to control the front dynamics is through controlling the allocation of the injected fluid to the injection wells.