

Short Biography:

Dr. Ali Ahmad

Dr. Ali Ahmad is a lecturer and research fellow in Nuclear Energy Policy at Princeton University's Program on Science and Global Security and Program in Science, Technology and Environmental Policy. He is also a visiting lecturer with DUIP's Energy Studies Program at the American University of Beirut. Dr. Ahmad's research and teaching cover nuclear energy and climate change, nuclear security and nonproliferation and the introduction of nuclear power to new markets. A Physics graduate from The Lebanese University in Beirut, Dr. Ahmad holds a PhD in Nuclear Engineering from Cambridge University. Main projects: included: Prospects of nuclear power in the Middle East; Management; financial and security risks of nuclear power in Jordan; and Nuclear non-proliferation in the Middle East.